In May 2015, the School of Arts, Design and Architecture at Aalto University held its annual fashion show Näytös, which presented the autumn/winter 2015 collections from both its BA and MA graduating students. The event, now a major highlight of Helsinki's fashion scene, is part of Pre Helsinki—a platform that aims to promote young Finnish designers. In recent years, the importance of Näytös has grown, and, in fact, it has now become one of the most anticipated graduate shows globally.

Undoubtedly, this is because Helsinki is quickly establishing itself as a major player in the field of progressive design, joining the likes of Antwerp, London, and Tokyo. Following in these cities' footsteps, Helsinki is rising as a capital of progressive fashion, consistently producing new designers who are pushing boundaries. The city's statement is also rather unique, with individualism being at its core.

Five of these bold Finnish graduate designers to watch are: Maria Suomalainen, Caroline Fors, design duo Hanne Jurmu & Anton Vartiainen, and Anni Raasmäki.
